For Immediate Release

The demand for cash continues

With more and more banks taking a very cautious approach to small business lending requests, specialist financiers such as The Interface Financial Group are reporting ongoing increases in requests for their services and are helping in part to fill the void left by the banks.

Irvine, CA (May 5, 2009) – David Banfield, President of The Interface Financial Group, highlighted this situation to a recent group of new franchisees at the completion of the formal training program explaining that as more and more banks limit their lending practices to the small business sector, Interface and similar specialist financiers are receiving more requests for funding and more referrals from banking institutions.

IFG's portfolio continues to grow and diversify. Banfield explains, "Interface is in a position to help small growing businesses almost regardless of the industry. If the small business' product or service is sold to another business on standard net 30 days terms, we (IFG) can help." Mr. Banfield continued "In order to service this growing need, Interface itself continues to expand our franchise base."

In recent weeks, through their 100+ North American franchise offices, Interface has funded transactions covering a wide variety of industries and funding requirements ranging from smaller to larger such as:

$3,000 — $10,000: Wholesale Import/Export, Wholesale Food Distributor, Staffing & Recruiting
$10,000 — $25,000: Sub-Contractor, Property Maintenance, Commercial Cleaning, Furniture Repair, Accounting
$25,000 — $100,000: Telecommunications, Aerospace, Remodeling, Manufacturing, Construction
$100,000 and above: Construction, Manufacturing, Telecommunications

"Unlike the banking industry, specialist financiers, like Interface, are "open for business" for the small business sector, and are often the only resource now available to the small business owner."
