Small business owners have more choices for working capital

David Banfield, President of The Interface Financial Group, reports that their financial services franchise organization has opened additional offices giving small business owners more opportunities to obtain the working capital they need to fund their expansion and growth plans.

Irvine, CA (PRESS RELEASE) February 3, 2010 – The Interface Financial Group, an international organization providing short-term cash flow assistance to small- and medium-sized businesses, announced the opening of new U.S. Interface offices in Arizona, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Ohio, Oregon, and Virginia, along with new Interface offices in Singapore, Australia, and New Zealand.

Interface President, David Banfield, indicated that these offices are in addition to existing IFG offices in the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and Singapore, and are needed to address the demand for the specialty working capital financing that Interface brings to the small business marketplace.

Every year thousands of new businesses are created, even in the most trying economic times. The growth rate in the small business sector places an ever-increasing demand on financial services such as the Interface invoice discounting program. Mr. Banfield indicated that the Interface organization will continue to grow as the demand for the service continues to grow. He further indicated that there was little likelihood that the demand would diminish in the foreseeable future.

Interface's invoice discounting program is able to meet small business owners' needs for short-term working capital in a timely and cost-effective manner. Those business owners, Interface clients, are usually unable to source working capital from conventional lenders such as commercial banks – something that has become even more difficult in recent times.

Interface has developed a franchise approach to the provision of short-term working capital. Each Interface office is independently owned and managed and this fact alone gives Interface – and their clients – a local advantage as transactions can be received, reviewed, and concluded in a very timely and professional manner.

Interface provides both a much-needed service for the small business community, and an outstanding business opportunity for individuals looking to own and operate their own professional financial service business.
